

Funding for Statistical Consulting and Research in Statistical Methodology

Abstract

The NIH funding for large center grants for biomedical research groups that include statistical consulting units, NIH/NSF programs that call for the development of statistical methodology in specific application areas, and NSF funding for pure methodology will be reviewed. Discussion will include NSF and NIH current budgets and levels of success for funding of individual investigator and program grants; as well as description of some current FOA (Funding Opportunity Announcements).